A Global Focus, Cutting Edge Content, World Class Speakers, Timely Topics, and an Unprecedented Scholarship Fund for Accessibility.

Counteracting Stress, Conflict, and Overwhelm to help Employees Stay Well at Work During Difficult Workplace Changes.

The inaugural Global Workplace Wellness Summit (#GWWS) is coming to the Bay Area with an impressive line-up of world class speakers for two high-impact days of roundtables, keynotes and presentations on November 7 and 8th, followed by a powerful post summit day of workplace wellness coaching skills training for leaders on November 9, 2018, supported by an unprecedented scholarship fund to help ensure even those on a budget can attend.

This annual professional development event is an opportunity to connect with peers, executives and experts from around the world to merge ideas that will create effective and sustainable wellness programs that will help employers save on the cost of health care for decades to come. For sponsorship and ticket information, and to learn more about this event, visit GlobalWorkplaceWellnessSummit.com.

While most workplace wellness programs offer support in the physical life dimension, they miss the opportunity to change their employees' mindsets and behaviors a process that will create lasting change. Thus, a high percentage of workplace wellness programs are ineffective and fail to produce a measurable Return-on-Investment for the employees or the organization.

The high-profile expert speakers, sponsors, and presenters at #GWWS are dedicated to creating a safe space to discuss the triumphs, challenges, and frustrations of making wellness a celebrated part of our working culture. They will showcase how improving workplace wellness can have a positive ripple-effect on organizations, the community, and our environment.

Tradeshow Vendors and Sponsors

The event has attracted Morneau Shepell, the largest employee assistant provider in Canada, and one of the only human resources consulting and technology company that takes an integrated approach to employee assistance, health, benefits and retirement needs. Sponsors of the Summit include the College of San Mateo and Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc., a workplace wellness coaching, consulting and training firm. There is still time to become a sponsor or exhibitor at this year's summit.

About GWWS: The Global Workplace Wellness Summit is an unparalleled opportunity to connect with peers, wellness executives, and experts. The Summit is attracting leaders, educators, human resources professionals, health care professionals and community wellness and disease prevention advocates. The Summit will take place on the beautiful grounds of the San Mateo College in the heart of the Silicon Valley.
